Green Screen Videos Get Results

More than half of American consumers view online video content at least once a week. In May 2008 alone, Americans viewed 12 billion online videos.

For companies savvy enough to use video on the web, it can mean increased website traffic, effective branding and ultimately more sales.

But perhaps the most important thing video brings to your website is trust! And a trusting consumer is more likely to patronize your business.

Green screen is a video special effect that enables us to position our subject in front of a green background, remove the green, and replace it with any location we have a photo or video for.

The most common example of green screen video is the standard tv weather report. The presenter is made to look like he's standing directly in front of the various weather maps, when in reality he's standing in front of a green background.
